BBC Radio

Between 1994 and 2004 Jyll Bradley kept her visual art practice private and focussed on writing for radio. Her numerous works for BBC Radio 4 took the form of original dramas, documentaries and adaptations. Her work often focused on bringing to light neglected texts by women. Highlights included her original drama 'Filet de Sole Veronique' (a winner of a European Broadcasting Union Award, Best Script 1997) and her much-praised first ever radio dramatization of American author Kate Chopin's seminal, banned novel 'The Awakening.' All radio works produced by Jonquil Panting.
